... to lower their prices and make other concessions. Now, with the advent of online reverse auctions, suppliers are under even more pressure to be price-competitive in a cutthroat global environment...

...But like it or not, they are going to comply with customers' wishes because reverse auctions will become a staple of procurement.

Large companies like Sun Microsystems say they've reduced their procurement costs through reverse auctions, in which OEMs use third-party e-commerce providers to solicit supply contract bids for...

...strictly to the lowest bidder. One EBN reader letter bluntly stated that OEMs using reverse auctions operate like used-car sales-people and will be treated that way by suppliers, who...

...in product returns and a damaged reputation among their customers.

But used properly, a reverse auction can level the playing field by allowing several qualified suppliers a chance to compete for business. Another EBN reader, a strategic sourcing vendor, said that sourcing tools used in auctions enable OEMs to rate suppliers based on delivery time, quality, performance, and responsiveness, in addition...

...that old-fashioned communication and cooperation between OEMs and suppliers can help make the reverse auction a win-win situation instead of yet another battle.

...Sun Microsystems said recently that only its preferred suppliers, or vendors wishing to attain that status, can participate in reverse auctions. The company also said the auctions will complement rather than replace traditional sourcing, and that Sun will consider technology strength,

Other web sites, such as BidPay .com, enable purchasers of an item from an auction web site to request a money order that can be mailed directly to the seller of the auctioned item to expedite the transfer of the auctioned item from the seller to the purchaser. Once a successful bid has been made for an item at an auction web site, the purchaser can choose to pay for the item by clicking on a BidPay .com logo, which links the purchaser to the BidPay .com web site. After the purchaser enters all of the necessary contact and billing information and after payment authorization has been received, a money order is printed out and mailed to the seller of the auctioned item. The money order is generally printed on an 8.5" x 11" sheet...

Exgmple 2: Pgyment for Intemet-Based Auction

The business model for the Intemet-based auction (e.g., eBay) is very basic in 2 1 concept, a meeting place for bringing together Internet buyers...

...and services. When a sale is completed between a seller and a buyer, the online auction house charges a sales commission. It is the responsibility of the seller and the buyer...

...buyer can mitigate a seller shipment delay if he is willing to go out and purchase a money order to send to the seller. If the buyer and seller wish to use a third-party payment clearinghouse, (e.g., Billpoint or PayPal...

...financial confidentiality.

With an electronic payment network consistent with the invention in place, an online auction house could provide a cost-effective and value-added anonymous payment alternative within its framework of auction services. When a sale is completed, the online auction house provides the means for the buyer to print out a 7- bar coded invoice statement, citing the online auction house as the biller of record with a transaction identification number. Instead of purchasing a money order, which would then have to be physically remitted, the buyer then pays this invoice at a local supermarket. When the online auction house receives the electronic payment the very I I next business day, it notifies the...

even more particularly to a competitive bidding process using network-enabled real property project management.

1 5 B. Description Of The Related Art

Currently, an owner of a site will either use a single service provider that has previously performed acceptable work, or they will draft all request for proposal (RFP) and notify a pre-selected group of services providers. The...

...the RFP is usually not detailed enough to account for and answer all of the bidder's questions. Mandatory pre- bid meetings are usually required in order to clarify the RFP, and written response from pre- bid meeting questions usually follow.

Answering the original question can lead to more questions, which require additional answers. This dialogue is generally cut short by the bid date.

Under the inventive system, the procurement officers and purchasing agents have most, if not all, of the necessary site information already available to the prospective bidders on the network. Immediate updates of the scope of work can be made whenever a bidder presents a better, or cheaper, alternative. The alternative can then be transmitted to all of the potential bidders. In an open bidding format, all the bidders are permitted to see the other competing bids in real time during the auction. This allows each bidder to reevaluate and resubmit a lower bid as many times as necessary during the bidding process.

eBay is an example of a seller's auction whereby the seller controls the terms...

In the preferred embodiment, rights negotiation is performed by means of the Rights Negotiation Web Server 120.

The information used in and produced by the rights negotiation is stored in the Patent Draft file in the Patent Draft Server 140. In the preferred embodiment, there are several web pages employed in the rights negotiation stage. A Bidding web page is used by members of the pool of co-inventors to file their bids, which would be stored in the Patent Draft f (inverted exclamation mark)le on the Patent Draft Server 140. A Bid Analysis web page is used by the initial inventor to access all of the bids, and, in addition, may include embedded code for modeling different possible apportionments of rights in...

The steps in the rights negotiation process according to the preferred embodiment are shown in FIG. 9. In step 901, an e-mail soliciting bids for the patent draft are sent to all members of the co-inventor pool. The members of the co-inventor pool who are interested in developing the patent draft enter bids for their selection as a co-inventor in step 905. The nature of the bids will depend on the nature of the embodiment. For instance,, the preferred embodiment is within...

...In an Internet embodiment, where the parties are only connected by the web page, the bid may be a straight percentage of any monies that result from any issued patent.

In the preferred embodiment, the initial inventor receives the various bids in step 910 and determines whether to accept any of the bids in step 915. In other embodiments,, the initial inventor and the interested participants would bid against each other to a patent draft committee, which would perform the tasks performed by the initial inventor in the preferred embodiment.. In the preferred embodiment, the bids are ,k" sealed', meaning the interested members of the co-inventor pool do not know what the other members have bid . If the initial inventor does accept any of the bids in step 915, it is determined whether all of the rights in the patent draft...

...assigned in step 917. If all the rights have been allotted, the results of the bidding are finalized in an executed agreement in step 950. If interests in the patent draft remain unallotted in step 917, or the initial inventor does not accept any bids in step 915, the initial inventor counter- bids in step 920. The members of the co-inventor pool still interested in bidding enter responses to the counter- bid in step 930. ... to bid for the item. The item information 146 varies by auction type.

Search Report from Ginger R. DeMille

However, the bid information 69 is, in this embodiment, the same for all auction types.

Bid information 69 includes a user ID 61 and a user password 62 for identifying and authenticating the user 61A that is submitting a bid for an auction. It also includes a bid price 64 for the item being sold and an optional message 63 to the poster of the auction. The user 61A has the option of submitting the bid with the message by clicking on button 68, submitting only the bid by clicking on button 67, or submitting only the message by clicking on button 66. Should user 61A make an error in filling the bid form, user 61A can reset the form by clicking on button 65 and fill out the form again.

The bid web pages 145a- I 45h contain information about the location 76A of the item being...

...payment options 72, and I 0 the shipping options 73 that the poster of the auction will accept. For example, the seller in Fig. 6a requires the buyer to pay for shipping and will only accept payments in the form of CODs, cashier's checks, and money orders.

Referring still to Fig. 6A, web page 145a shows a bid web page for an item 92a that is being sold in an English auction 133A. The corresponding item information 146A includes 1 5 the total number of bids that have been made 83A, the current highest bid 78A, the minimum bid increment 79A, and the seller's reservation price 82A. The user 61 A uses this information to determine his bid amount 64. The item information 146A also includes the time left 75A before the auction closes.

Referring to Fig. 613, web page 145b shows a bid web page for an item 92b that is being sold in a clock auction 133B. The corresponding item information 146B includes a pricing rule 85B that specifies how the...

... is satisfied that the check will clear, etc., before the good(s) are transferred.

Internet auctions include, for example, normal auctions in which people enter bids and the bid price goes up as people bid higher and higher, as well as what are called Dutch auctions. In a Dutch auction, the process begins at a certain price, and the price goes down until somebody makes an offer at the current price. In a Dutch auction, effectively, someone wins the bid, because there are time frames. In other words, the bids are scheduled to end at a certain time, so they do not go continuously.

In any event, when the bidding ends, the seller notifies the buyer via e-mail that the buyer has won the bid and asks the buyer to send the seller payment, such as a check or a...

...paid. The buyer expects the seller to package and ship the good(s) to the buyer when the seller receives a money order or a certified check.

However, if the buyer pays by personal check, the seller typically waits several weeks for the check to clear before packaging and shipping the good(s). While one auction house has recently started a voluntary verification process in which users can have themselves "verified uncertainty in Internet auction transactions, for example, as to whether buyers or sellers really exist.

There is likewise also...

...The seller's risk lies, for example, in putting the seller's merchandise up for auction and receiving a winning bid, and waiting a month or more to discover that the buyer does not exist or...

A second knowledge worker having the task of approving the bid proposal, communicates a need or request to server 14 for a copy of the final draft of the bid proposal. In response to the request, control module 24 accesses status information stored in knowledge matrix 18, which indicates that the final draft of the bid proposal is not yet available. in a particular embodiment, the entry in knowledge matrix 18 that corresponds to the requested instance (final draft) of the requested data item ( bid proposal) is empty.

Similarly, the entry in knowledge matrix 18 corresponding to the step (generation of final draft) of the pending process item (generate bid proposal) is also empty. Therefore, control module 24 can query knowledge matrix 18 to determine...

Amazon.com Payments

With the launch of zShops, Amazon .com introduced Amazon .com Payments, which allows individuals to pay for zShops purchases with credit cards using Amazon .com's 1-Click payment feature, thus eliminating what is considered the greatest inconvenience of online transactions between individuals: the delays, hassles, and risks of sending checks and money orders through regular mail.

... of Inter@ctive Week.

In the first six months of 1998, the FTC received 300 auction -fraud complaints. That number jumped twentyfold to 6,000 for the same period this year. Most often, buyers report sending their money via check or money order and never receiving the promised goods in return.

"Buyers aren't 'bewareing' at Internet auctions," writes Randy Barrett, Washington bureau chief of the Internet's newspaper.

FTC officials said most...

BidPay.com Revolutionizes eCommerce ; New Company Offers Money Orders Online

NEW YORK--(BUSINESS WIRE)--July 26, 1999--BidPay.com is offering online consumers another choice.

BidPay .com is a new patent pending service that makes online auction transactions more efficient by offering money orders for sale on the Internet .

The seller has the option to send the goods before the money order arrives once they receive the confirmation email. The company's focus is on auction sites , such as eBay and Amazon , and is planning to expand to other eCommerce markets. In addition, BidPay makes their services available to customers outside of the U.S. -- if a seller requests payment in the form of a money order , non-U.S. residents can now purchase money orders in the correct currency.

" Online auctions were only lacking in one area and BidPay .com has responded by offering money orders on the Internet ," said Stephen Chin, President of BidPay . "We created the company to simplify the payment process after the auction has ended and speed up the overall transaction time. The company is poised to make...

Method for id auction

Abstract (Basic):

... A method for an ID auction is provided to increase the effectiveness of an advertisement by providing an ID to a user according to a turn of the user who inputs the lowest bidding price first, and by providing a determined compensation to the user who uses an ID...

... A user who will use a draft of an advertisement as the user's ID connects to the Internet using an application program(200). The user connects to an auction site(201). The user selects an auction item(202). After that, the user inputs an amount of money to be compensated at the expenses for using the draft of the advertisement(203). A bid is added(204). It is judged whether a bid meets the deadline(205). In case that the bid meets the deadline, it is notified that the time for the bid is finished. In addition, data on a successful bid are displayed to a screen(206). After a determined time passes, the bid is deleted...
